

The broadcast flag is a bad idea. Law abiding consumers are the group this will impact the most. Specifically, people who make a recording to watch another time. The hackers and bad folks out there who this is meant to stop will find a way to get around it. These movies they seek to protect come out on DVD before they are even broadcast and certainly they can't be worried about the prime time drive. So no to another big brother intrusion. Hollywood will survive without it.
